Immigration Quota Accepted

The Jewish Agency for Palestine changed its mind on the question of immigration certificates and agreed to accept the interim quota of 1,500 a month offered by the British Government.

In the matter of the immigration certificates the Jewish Agency continued to insist on a grant of 100,000. But it has accepted an allotment of 1,000 certificates that it can distribute among Jews abroad especially trained for settlement life in Palestine. This is about the number of certificates remaining available after certain deductions until the Anglo-American Inquiry Committee makes its report.

The British allotment of 1,500 a month is retroactive to last December 15, when the White Paper quota was exhausted, and runs for three months to March 15. Out of the 4,500 certificates the British Government deducts 1,250 for illegal immigrants who arrived in recent months. Further deductions will be made for 700 immigrants.

Also under consideration—and strongly objected to by the Jewish Agency—is a British plan to deduct several hundred more for Palestine soldiers who arrived illegally after the White Paper was issued in May, 1939, and who enlisted in the British Army. They are now to be legalized and the British Government argues that their number should be deducted along with other "illegals."

In addition to the 1,000 certificates the Jewish Agency was to receive a few hundred more when the exact number of deductions was decided.

If the Agency had continued to decline the Government offer, the certificates would have been distributed among various countries [illegible] and no

[illegible] Commission.

Bevin previously had suggested that the quota, provided for in the 1939 White Paper, be continued during the commission inquiry. The Arab high committee rejected this proposal on January 22.

While British authorities intensified a drive to end disorders, the clandestine radio station Voice of Israel, operated by the Jewish resistance movement, denounced the government's new and rigid defense regulations as "undisguised terror without precedent in modern times." The broadcast said

Jews Though Few Seen Unbeaten

Hartley F. Crum, of San Francisco, a member of the Anglo-American Committee of Inquiry on Jewish Problems in Europe, reported in Vienna that Jews he had seen in camps in the American occupation zone of Germany were so desperate that they would soon start fighting their way to Palestine or protesting their lot with a wave of suicides.

Members of the committee arriving from visits to the American and British zones of Germany, Czechoslovakia and Poland reported a universal desire of Jews to flee Europe and an almost equally widespread desire to go to Palestine.

Mr. Crum said that at certain camps half the refugees when asked for a second choice if they could not go to Palestine replied that it was the crematory, says Albion Ross, in the New York Times.

Estimating the number of Polish Jews in the American zone or Germany at 55,000 and the number in Poland at 70,000, Mr. Crum said he thought the Jews could be kept from reaching the breaking point if 100,000 were admitted to Palestine this year.

Judge Joseph C. Hutcheson of Texas, American co-chairman of the committee, who visited the British zone, said that everywhere Jews shouted or chanted, "To Palestine, to Palestine." A member of a subcommittee that had visited Poland said that 85 to 90 per cent of the Jews there wanted to leave Europe as soon as possible and that of those 90 per cent wanted to go to Palestine. He reported a lack of interest in flight to America.

Two members of the committee found a widespread feeling among refugee Jews that anti-Semitism [illegible] or so-called [illegible] camps in Germany and Czechoslovakia.

Many Jews who had left Poland reported, according to Mr. Crum, that they had fled in terror of their lives. Mr. Crum and a member of the subcommittee said that the Polish Jews were unanimous in declaring that the Polish Government was strongly opposed to anti-Semitism but that the Polish population as a whole was bitterly anti-Semitic. The subcommittee member heard testimony that the anti-Semitism was far worse than it had been and that it was connected with the political program of opponents of the Government.

To Study Racial Bias

Two methods of approaching and dealing with racial tension were examined in a closed session in the second day of a conference of the Commission on Community Inter-Relations of the American Jewish Congress at the Waldorf-Astoria, in New York.

In a press conference afterward, Henry Epstein, former Solicitor General of New York State and chairman of the commission's national advisory board, explained that "we are dealing with social science on the same basis as medicine and are seeking to find methods of immunizing communities against the virus of racial prejudice".

One project, he said, was the use of what he called the socio-drama in communities to demonstrate the causes of racial friction. The second involved controlled experiments with college students to explore causes and incidence of prejudice.

In the latter project, Dr. Gordon W. Allport, of Harvard University, discovered that persons feeling least secure in their surroundings have the greatest amount of racial and religious prejudice; persons having the most contact with any particular group hold the least prejudices toward its members; and prejudices and dislikes acquired between the ages of two and eleven and after seventeen are the strongest in the minds of those studied.

Papers Ask Jews To Find Extremists

The conservative and influential Palestine Post which, like others, [illegible] from which the elements invariably suffer more than the guilty."

The newspaper Haaretz declared these incidents had given the Jewish people an "opportunity of reminding itself that forces are being let loose that cannot afterward be controlled," and added:

"We have to pursue the difficult struggle against British policy and there are many ways of doing it. But the Jewish public has repeatedly stated that 'Our fight is against British policy, not British soldiers.'"

One newspaper called the attack a "wanton act in which terrorists chose their own battlefield without reference to the wishes of the people."

It also criticized the behavior of the police and the troops and said that the people of Palestine were alarmed over the recent actions of African troops. It asked: "Is our security to be entrusted to colonial troops?"

Says Price Of Survival Is Amity

Tolerance is the basis of national unity and the only hope for a peaceful world, Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson told 1,750 persons at the thirty-ninth annual meeting of the American Jewish Committee at the Waldorf-Astoria, in New York.

The efforts of the Committee, Mr. Patterson said, are more than a counter-offensive against bigotry. "They are a direct campaign for the eternal principles of our country." Tolerance must be the goal of all men, he said, "if mankind is to survive."

Mr. Patterson, who returned from a four-week tour of European battlefields, predicted that the time will come when "some will try to mitigate the war guilt of Germany and Japan" and an effort made to distribute the responsibilities among all nations.

"That will be a hard job," he added, "in the face of the record, but I have no doubt that the attempt will be made." He warned all Americans that "when that time comes" they should not forget the "record of the last twenty years" and be misled into "belittling the fight for freedom and decency."

Dr. John Slawson, executive vice-president of the Committee, charged in an earlier session that industrialists and leaders of big

Two-Thirds To Leave Vienna

More than two-thirds of the 4,418 Jews in Vienna January 31 have announced their intention to leave Austria and Europe as soon as the opportunity is offered.

An official census taken by the Vienna Jewish Community Organization under foreign auspices showed that of 3,023 Jews who want to leave Vienna, 1,055 want to go to Palestine, 1,260 are willing to go anywhere, 275 wanted to go to the United States, 168 to Britain and 20 elsewhere in Europe.

The others expressed preference for overseas countries, such as Australia and various Latin-American countries.

Of those willing to stay in Vienna, 595 are more than 60 years old and nearly all are more than 40. Of the 4,100 adult Jews in Vienna, 500 have regular employment. Those employed are doctors or attorneys or persons working for the Americans or British.

The community included 1,031 former business men and employees of commercial establishments. Nearly all these are without jobs.

Food Cut At Refugee Camps

American officials launched a program to eliminate excess food deliveries to camps for displaced persons in Bavaria, a situation held responsible for most of the Munich district's extensive black market in food.

Military government authorities, estimating that some camps were over-supplied fifty per cent, said food deliveries would be cut twenty per cent at all camps. Hence [illegible] will be based on the [illegible] officials said the changeover would be difficult to put in effect because menus for displaced persons are not organized as Army messes are. But they pointed out that when food is distributed uncooked or through a commissary there is no way to prevent refugees from selling it instead of eating it.

A spot check of one area revealed that displaced persons were involved in 51 per cent of all black market cases. Twenty-two per cent of those involved were Germans and 17 per cent were persons who had filtered illegally into the district.

Settle In Banned Zone Of Palestine

Three settlements which were established in Palestine are situated in the zone where Jews are prohibited under the White Paper land regulations from acquiring new land. The groups which occupied the three places at dawn had assembled the night before in the Galilean hill-top colony of Birya, which was established a year ago.

At break of day two trucks left the Birya hill-toy to join a row of trucks and buses coming out of Safed. The convoy of fifteen vehicles headed for the hill of Ein Zeitim (meaning "well of olives"), the site of one of the new settlements. Dozens of young people in their teens had hiked from Safed through the night to take part in the occupation.

The settlers form a communal group named Maginim, which means watchmen. Half of the eighty-five youths are native Palestinians, the remainder Europeans, including six veterans of Bergen-Belsen concentration camp in Germany.

The settlement buildings had been partly erected when a police car arrived from Safed. The officers took notes and departed.

Similar determined groups moved out during the night to the two other places, where youths occupied 600 acres connecting Upper and Lower Galilee, and 600 acres in the Beisan Valley.

The Galilee youths, in the presence of Moshe Sharrett and other leaders of the Jewish Agency, erected a solemn defiance of the White Paper immigration and land restriction, reports the London Jewish Chronicle. They erected on the hill the outline of a book and the inscription "White

Symbols In Red Paint Deface Store

Fascist and Communist symbols and the German word "Jude"—startlingly reminiscent of Hitlerian tactics against European Jews—appeared in flaming red paint across the windows of a small Russian War Relief depot at 4021 Skillman Avenue, Sunnyside, Queens, New York.

Whoever defaced the store, police of the Long Island City station said, was neither amateurish nor playing any favorites. In broad, bold strokes, the Nazi swastika, the Communist hammer and sickle, the Jewish six-pointed Star of David and the word "Jude" were painted side by side across the four window panels. The smearing incident aroused the neighborhood. After the heavy paint had been laboriously removed, posters were placed in the windows, reading: "Is this what our sons died for? Died for? What are you going to do about it?" and "Protest meeting! Here tonight at 8:15".

Mimeographed notices describing the incident and calling for an "overwhelming large meeting to give the answer of America to Nazism" were circulated throughout Sunnyside by young school children. The notice was signed by an anonymous group which termed itself "The Emergency Committee Against Anti-Semitism."

The children said they had been told to distribute the papers but under no circumstances to say anything to any one. The police did not know who was promoting the mass meeting, nor did the Am-

Truman Praises Oswego Work

A letter of appreciation from President Truman to William Rosenwald of New York, honorary president of the National Refugee Service, on the occasion of the closing of the emergency refugee shelter at Oswego, N.Y., and resettlement of its 924 residents in the U.S. was made public at the fourteenth annual general assembly of the Council of Jewish Federations and Welfare Funds, in Detroit, Mich.

Mr. Rosenwald, who read the letter from the President, praised the humanitarian leadership of the Chief Executive in issuing his recent directive to facilitate the immigration of refugees and displaced persons from the American occupied zones in Europe.

He pointed to the world-wide significance of the maintenance of the American tradition of hospitality to the oppressed, and of a successful adjustment program for refugees in this country.

The National Refugee Service was designated by the Government to carry out the task of resettling the Oswego refugees and arranging for them a new start in life as prospective Americans.

Mr. Rosenwald told the President that these operations were completed within four weeks in sixty-five cities and towns in almost every state.

Joseph E. Beck, executive director of the service, told the community leaders that his agency joined with other national groups, Protestant, Catholic, Jewish and non-sectarian, in establishing a joint committee, of which he is

Who Wants To Go Back To Candles?

The ladies sometimes like the dim, flattering light of candles. But most people, even if they could get far greater illumination from candles at far less cost, would prefer electric light.

Considerations of health, comfort, convenience, cleanliness and safety, have become more important to the modern way of life than the factor of cost.

Nevertheless, it costs money to survey new power sites, harness waterfalls, and build transmission lines, so that when you flick a switch or set a thermostat you can be sure of light and heat at your fingertips. Quite possibly a part of your own Life Insurance premium has been invested in the public utilities which render these services.

Government supervision of all such investments safeguards the money laid away by more than four million thrifty policyholders, united for their common security in the great co-operative business of Life Insurance.

This portion of every dollar invested out of Life Insurance funds helps to finance thousands of building and transportation projects, public utilities, industries, etc., which create employment throughout the country. The remainder is in municipal bonds, farm and town mortgages, etc. In addition, $000,000 is paid out in direct benefits every working day to policyholders or their loved ones.

ORDERS BAPTIZED CHILD RETURNED TO JEWS

A judgment, creating a precedent of far-reaching consequence for Belgian Jewry, was pronounced by Judge Suetens in the Brussels Law Courts. In the case in question, the first of its kind to be brought before a Belgian court, Mlle. Edith Epstein, the relative of a Jewish orphan child who had been sheltered and concealed from the Germans by a Christian, Mme. A. C. Cordier, sued for the restoration of the child. The plaintiff claimed that she was the child's next-of-kin.

The child had been baptised, and the defendant submitted that as she had been entrusted with the care of the child by the parents, who were no longer alive, she was entitled to adopt the child, as she had already done.

The Judge, giving his decision in favour of the plaintiff, said that when Belgian non-Jews concealed Jewish children from the Germans they were merely fulfilling their duty as good citizens to the State. This, however, did not entitle them to adopt and retain the children if their restoration was claimed. It was also wrong, commented the Judge, for those who had rescued Jewish children to alienate them from their ancestry —an apparent reference to the baptism of Jewish children—as this meant taking advantage of the inhuman persecution the Jews had endured.

"PHEASANTS IN THE SNOW"

"What Can I Do?"

The deep snows of a Canadian Winter, though they add vastly to the invigorating pleasures of outdoor recreation, are all too often only an added hazard in the lives of the wild creatures that inhabit our forests and fields. When heavy snow covers natural food supplies, game birds such as pheasants and partridge—even large animals like moose and deer—face death by starvation.

You may ask: "What can I do about it?"—this is a question each of us should ask and yet the answer is not hard to find. There is a part that you can play in the conservation of Canada's great heritage—of your great heritage of forest wealth, beauty and wild life. The first step in playing this part is to have a complete awareness of the vital need for conservation.

To assist you, Carling's invite you to become a member of The Carling Conservation Club. Through this medium you will obtain information on the needs of conservation and the ways in which you can help. *Write now for membership to Dept. (D13), The Carling Breweries Limited, Waterloo, Ontario.

THE DEDICATION OF THE HILLEL FOUNDATION AT McGILL UNIVERSITY

By Shaqum F. Cohen

The Hillel Foundation of McGill University, at 3460 Stanley Street, in Montreal, was dedicated on Thursday, February 14, by Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, of the Jewish Institute of Religion, in New York. It was a great occasion.

The Foundation was established in the fall of 1944 as the third in Canada, with others previously organized at Queen's University and the University of Manitoba. Since then, two more have been instituted, at the Universities of Saskatchewan and Toronto. There are over one hundred and thirty Hillel Foundations and counsellorships in the United States, Canada, and Cuba, all under the direction of Dr. Abraham L. Sachar, of New York.

Hillel Foundations were inaugurated in 1923, at the University of Illinois, by Dr. Edward Chauntey Baldwin, a Pilgrim, and professor of Biblical literature there, and by Rabbi Benjamin Frankel, a young graduate of the Hebrew Union College, who were helped by Isaac Kuhn, of Champaign, Illinois, the University town. After a year, the Bnai Brith, a service organization, decided to sponsor the Foundations. The name of Hillel was picked as a name that would stand for the best in Jewish traditions, for Hillel was a Babylonian Jew in the last century, B.C.E., a patriarch and sage whose instruction embodied the religious and moral teachings of Judaism: the virtues of philanthropy, fear of God, and humility.

The work of Hillel directors and counsellors is to integrate Jewish life on the campus, and to stimulate its expression as an organized group and a part of the campus community. They are Rabbis, or qualified laymen; and like Rabbi Avraham Soltes, formerly of New York, McGill Hillel's new director, most of them are young men, not far removed from being students themselves, and able to understand the students' point of view, and to take part in their life.

Rabbi Soltes was the former Hillel director at Cornell University, and is a graduate of Columbia University, with an M.A. degree, and of the Jewish Institute of Religion, where he was conferred the degree of Rabbi and Master of Hebrew Literature, in 1942. He was director of musical activities of the Hebrew Arts Committee, of New York, and the Jewish Theological Seminary; dramatic coach at the Hebrew High School; and director of religious activities at Pleasantville Cottage School.

At the dedication of the new Hillel Foundation, Rabbi Soltes, tall and slight, wore the blue McGill Arts hood, and when he was asked about it, he admitted that it wasn't quite Columbia's blue, but near enough. He is a handsome man, fair in coloring, and with a popular, easy manner, the diplomacy of a born leader, and the tact and kindness of a trusted personal counsellor. He is adaptable and versatile, and already has acquired McGill idiom. Mrs. Soltes and their son, Marnen, live at 4331 Isabella Avenue, Montreal. Marnen is Hebrew for "singer", and Rabbi Soltes disclosed proudly that, although Marnen is only two, he is a singer already.

Rabbi Soltes can count on the cooperation of McGill's principal, Dr. Cyril F. James, who wrote to Dr. Sachar, after the Students' Executive Council approval of the establishment of the Foundation, saying in part, that the Board of Governors, "when it learned of this decision, expressed itself as highly enthusiastic about this new development, and asked me to extend to you its best wishes for the success of the enterprise".

Rabbi Wise, who dedicated the Hillel House, was born in Budapest, in 1874, and graduated with the degree of B.A. and Ph.D. from Columbia. In 1907, this Jewish leader, known all over the world as such, founded the Free Synagogue in New York. He is president of the Jewish Institute of Religion, a non-sectarian institution for the training of Rabbis and Jewish community leadership, and the eighteen graduates of the Institute who are serving Hillel, including Rabbi Soltes, make him very proud.

Speaking after Rabbi Wise, Rabbi Soltes described him as being "altogether too unique in the contemporary world scene"; and Rabbi Wise spoke with the appeal of a rare prophet for the young people there. He told the assembly that Hillel does not mean only social mingling of a certain social group, but "an expression of young, educated people to align themselves to become a part of the ethical and spiritual forces of American Jewish life."

Hillel, he said, has filled a deep need in American Jewish life, in its effort "to rid young Jews of their ignorance of Jewish life, and to make them ashamed of their ignorance of the great intellectual achievements. . . . Wherever men rise to destroy Jews, they grow out of the will to destroy human freedom and democracy. . . . We, sons and daughters of a great people, must remember that we are not beggars, that we are not spiritual waifs, but that we are the authors and creators of a great tradition. . . . Hillel is the effort of Bnai Brith and collateral organizations to help young Jewish students realize their heritage, in proud possession of a common spiritual treasure. . . . It is an organized attempt to help young Jewish men and women understand their traditions."

Rabbi Wise's final prayer was: "In the name of Hillel, and in the name of its underlying spirit . . . in our name, I pray that God will give His blessing to the Hillel House. I herewith declare this house dedicated to the high uses for which it was founded. Do Thou love it, God."

Rabbi Charles Bender, of Adath Israel Synagogue, pronounced the invocation; Morrie Levy, president of Mount Royal Lodge of Bnai Brith, spoke after him. Responsive readings, with the Hillel Choral Group, were led by Arthur Garmaise and Harold Gordon; rich-voiced Cantor Nathan Mendelson, and the Hillel Choir, sang. Oscar Faerman, assisted by Manuel Lazarovits, House Committee chairman, and Mrs. Harry Miller, affixed the Mezuzah to the doorpost. Mr. Faerman, Reuben Spector, A. J. Paull, and I. M. Pascal carried scrolls in the Torah procession — beautiful Torahs, with gold-embroidered Torah covers, and tinkling bells. Bernard Lefell spoke a psalm at the chapel door; Rabbi Benjamin M. Kahn, former Hillel director, dedicated the chapel; and Harry Benjamin lit the Ner Tamid, the perpetual light. Representatives of the Student Christian Movement, the Newman Club, and the Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship spoke appreciatively of the Hillel House, and they were thanked by Martin Sterlin, Hillel president. Dr. David L. Thompson, speaking on behalf of the University, was thanked by Max Bernfeld, K.C. Rabbi Wise pronounced the final benediction.

The Hillel House in Montreal is a gracious and enriching building, formerly a private residence. It was spaciously redecorated and refurnished, to be inviting and comfortable, not austere. The work was done under the chairmanship of Oscar Faerman and Mos Feldman, with a committee of Mesdames Mayer Hymus, L. Quint, and Joseph Lande; and C. C. Gollis, Harry Kirsch and Reuben Spector, with C. Davis Goodman as consulting architect.

On the first floor, the large lounge, decorated with spring flowers for the dedication, has chesterfields, easy chairs and tables, marble fireplaces and bay-windows; and there are the library, with a growing collection of books; a fully-equipped kitchen; and a lunch-room, with wall-benches and black composition tables. The second-floor has the chapel, board-room, the Rabbi's study, and a music-room. On the third floor, there are a ping-pong room, a games-room, two class-rooms; and a newspaper office, lined with candid pictures of Hillel life. There are locker-rooms in the basement, and a projected auditorium is being planned for next year. The stairs are light wood, with carved mouldings, and there are stained-glass windows at the stair-case and front door. The Hillel House is a proud focal-point, as a centre of activity for Jewish students, and, accordingly, as a part of McGill University life.

The Hillel Foundation makes no distinctions between fraternity and sorority groups, and unaffiliated students, who constitute the large majority; or of Jewish religious differences; or of age-and-experience distinctions between war veterans and other students.

The Hillel House is for everyone, and acts as the authorized voice of the Jewish students. At the beginning of the year, students registered for activities, such as taking part in religious observances. They were asked if they could play an instrument, sing or dance, do skits, or even act as masters of ceremonies; if they were interested in art; or music, for choir work, and musicales; Zionist group-work, including folk dancing; publicity work, such as making posters; office work; study groups; recreation; dramatics, directing and acting; stage lighting, costuming, play-writing; public speaking; Hillel papers, including the weekly mimeographed bulletin, or the printed "Hillel McGillah"; and House Committee, which includes members' services as hosts and hostesses. Those interested in Student Welfare help coordinate their community projects and combined appeals. This year, student fund-raising for relief work, aside from the University welfare drive, has a central appeal and fund.

Student officers are: Martin Sterlin, president, assisted by the executive, Naomi Pinsky, Arthur Garmaise, Ena Rosenfeld, Harold Gordon, and Vivian Epstein; and committee chairman: Nancy Marcus, Hinda Ordower, Morris Neftin, Gerald Charness, Manuel Lazarovitz, Arthur Garmaise, Leonard Levine, Naomi Pascal, Isidore Rosenfeld, Neville Lefcoe, Bernard Lefell, David Krashinsky, Laura Kaplan, Harold Rosenbaum, Dora Berkson, and Miriam Klein.

Rabbi Soltes says that McGill's Hillel work is the most varied and richest of all the Hillels. The "Hillel McGillah" is the only Hillel paper with a regular Hebrew column, as an example. The Rabbi directs courses, in, for instance, beginner and advanced Hebrew; Jewish customs, and history; and there are some Foundations where such work is counted for college credits. When the demand arose for a course in group leadership, one was installed with a student director, Bill Hymovitch, who is a Y.M.H.A. supervisor.

The Hillel is putting on an ambitious Purim play, "By George", with a choir and a chorus; produced by Roel Barkstein, of Toronto, a veteran. A gay poster advertises it on the front stairway. The Hillel won the McGill-Queen's Hillel Foundations annual debating series, and their shining cup stands on the hall mantelpiece.

Every Saturday night, open house is held, and every other Saturday, there are Havdalah services, and an Oneg Shabbot. A Hillel branch was opened at Dawson College, in St. Johns, Quebec, and students there are invited in to the Hillel House every week-end.

Dr. Clyde Miller, professor of education at Columbia, and author of the Springfield Plan, gave two lectures in the Ethnic Democracy series of the Hillel program. James C. MacDonald, former High Commissioner for Refugees of the League of Nations, and a member of the Anglo-American Board of Inquiry on Palestine, spoke on "Palestine And The Post-War World", at a jointly sponsored meeting of the Student Christian Movement and the Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship and, Hillel. This February, a series of four lectures was planned in a Contemporary Jewish Religion series. Those who have spoken are: Rabbi Chaim N. Denburg, on Traditional Judaism; H/Capt. L. A. Weintraub, on Conservative Judaism; and Dr. Harry J. Stern, on Reform Judaism. The last speaker will be Rabbi Jack J. Cohen, director of the Jewish Reconstructionist Fellowship, of New York.

Hillel and McGill-crested notices; time-table printed blotters; and the personal Hillel welcome are just a part of this varied and attractive program for everyone, and of the development of members of the college community until they can take their place effectively in the larger community after graduation. With that in mind, Rabbi Soltes, speaking at the dedication ceremonies, said that "Jewish life holds only if it is in agreement with its inner forms. . . . We should nurture our hereditary thirst after knowledge, to prove a worthy link in the network of Jewish homes."

Commentaries

By Dr. Harry J. Stern, Rabbi

When Religions Meet

The Fifth Temple Emanu-El Institute on Judaism for Christian Clergy and Educators drew the largest attendance of any previous gathering of its kind. Professor Israel Bettan, of the Hebrew Union College, in Cincinnati, Ohio, dealt with the general theme, "The Sermon In The Synagogue, Yesterday And Today," and specifically the first lecture was devoted to the engaging subject, "Jewish Preaching In The Middle Ages," followed by a second address, equally engaging: "The Rise Of The Modern Era And The Role Of The Jewish Pulpit."

A stirring call upon the teachers of various religions to cooperate with each other in the building of the just society was given at the luncheon session of the Institute by the Rev. Dr. Col. Kilpatrick, D.S.C., Principal of the United Theological College. Acknowledging religious differences, he pointed to the essential kinship of all religions, that should enable the religious leaders to present a united front in the struggle for universal peace.

Five years ago we founded the Institute at a time when a large portion of the globe suffered a spiritual blackout. We hold that the world now being physically one, the leaders of religion must help to make it spiritually one. We can do this by sympathetic appreciation for each other's creed and by mutual respect.

Religions must present a united front in facing the problems of the post-war world especially. Before we can have world brotherhood we must, through knowledge, have enlightened brotherhood in every community. In Canada, Temple Emanu-El, Montreal, has been the pioneer in establishing the Institute on Judaism and we rejoice that now other communities are sponsoring such ventures in religious fellowship.

A Letter From Dachau Concentration Camp

This pathetic letter, written to me in Yiddish, I give here in translation. Though dated June 18, 1945, it reached me, curiously enough, only on January 29, 1946. I am now trying to contact my old acquaintance. The communication speaks for itself and even if the prophet Jeremiah, I would still be unable to find that measure of lamentation with which to comment upon the tragic [illegible] when you visited Europe together with my late brother, Isaac Golden, of Uniontown (Pa.). Since then twenty-three years have passed. In the meantime, I finished my studies and established myself as practicing physician in Kovno, the capital of Lithuania; married and had a child. What has become of all this, you undoubtedly know. All you could read in the newspapers or listen to over the radio was merely a faint idea of what the Jews had to go through under the Nazis: our human language is too poor to describe it properly.

"Of the Lithuanian Jewry, some 250,000 strong, a mere 3,000 to 4,000 have survived; the rest have all been exterminated. The sum total of the suffering of this community alone equals those of whole Jewish generations over thousands of years. We, the survivors, frequently envy the dead ones because the wounds as well as the moral state hurt constantly. True, our enemy has been beaten and conquered and we have had our revenge, but conditions for us are not much easier, for the sacred souls that have perished cannot be revived and the sufferings extirpated.

"What are we now to do? Where do we go from here? Never in the past have we felt such an urge for our own families (relatives) and a Jewish surrounding as today. These we no longer have in Europe these days. Only in Palestine and in the United States is a Jewish existence possible now. I have written to my brothers in the United States and believe they will take steps so that I may be admitted to the U.S.A. But I am not sure that they, alone, will be able to so arrange matters for me and that in general an immigration to the USA will be possible. I therefore address my special request to you that you please help me establish a new existence for myself in the United States, Canada, or Palestine.

"There is as yet no postal service from here so that I must send this letter otherwise. For the time being, it will not be possible for you to write to me. I shall, from time to time, advise you of any new address, and perhaps the postal service will by then be resumed. In the meantime you could perhaps, through the medium of competent organizations, start the preparatory steps on my behalf in connection with my eventual admission to one of the above countries. I am well, and with a liberal profession, so I will not become a burden to any one. My temporary address is: Dr. Med. Lazar Goldstein, Dachau Concentration Camp, Building 37 b."

the resistance groups would ignore the regulations.

"You are warned," the broadcast said. "Tyranny breeds revenge!"

Informed persons said the British intend to enforce strictly the new regulations, providing the death penalty for unauthorized possession of firearms and for other offenses against the government, and severe penalties for persons taking part in any illegal activities.

The commissioner dealt a blow to illegal immigration on January 28 by providing for forfeiture of vehicles, vessels or aircraft engaged in the traffic. The new rules place the burden of proving non-complicity in illegal activities on the suspect.

Paper," then hitched up a horse and ploughed it up. These youths are preparing the settlement for a group of veterans of the Jewish Brigade, who will take over when demobbed.

The third settlement, Emunim, in the Beisan Valley, was taken possession of by a pioneer group of Hapoel Hamizrachi. The Beisan lands were State property and vast tracts were given from to rich Arab families in spite of the Mandate requirement to aid Jewish land settlement. The entire zone is now strictly forbidden for Jewish purchase although it is largely uncultivated. Two American pioneer girls are members of the group.

THE PROBLEM OF PALESTINE AND THE ANGLO-AMERICAN COMMITTEE OF INQUIRY

By Don Cook, In The New York Herald Tribune

To the long list of commissions—public and private, intergovernmental and unilateral—which have studied and reported on the problem of Palestine, the Anglo-American Committee of Inquiry is now adding its record.

Composed of six British members and six Americans, the committee has taken testimony in Washington, New York and London and is now on the Continent, where it is charged with determining exactly how many Jews want to make Palestine their permanent home.

The group will spend a week in Cairo examining the record of its hearings up to that time and correlating the data and evidence it is to collect in Europe. The month of March will then be spent in Palestine itself, the committee hearing witnesses on both sides of the issue, in Jaffa and Tel-Aviv, studying the conditions of the country at first hand and possibly visiting the other Middle East capitals of Damascus, Bagdad and Beirut, to take further testimony.

The twelve men are then expected to retire to the Swiss city of Lucerne to draft their report on recommendations to the governments of Great Britain and the United States.

The problem of Palestine has been before the world forcibly since the Balfour Declaration of 1917, and therefore inevitably any examination of the present inquiry boils down to two basic questions. What new factors does the Anglo-American committee face in its studies that have not been faced before, and what is the caliber of the commission at whose decision the modern history of the Middle East may turn?

The answers to both questions are disappointing. There is a profound sense of urgency about the Zionist [illegible] of the plight of the Jewish millions of Europe from the terrorism of the Nazis. There is a sense of responsibility, considerably less profound on the part of the United States, but which unfortunately became so identified with the New York City election that there is, to say the least, considerable doubt on the British side as to the real desire of America to contribute to a solution and back that solution to the hilt no matter what the consequences. But beyond these factors, plus the passage of time and the appearance of the British White Paper in 1939, very little is changed from the days of the Peel Commission, which studied the problem for the British government in 1936.

A sense of urgency and a sense of responsibility can contribute immensely to the solution of any problem. In the case of the Palestine Committee, however, these are so tempered by other factors that neither seems to have had any positive effect toward solving the various problems.

Witnesses have marched to the stand by the score to plead the cause of a Jewish state in Palestine—some logically, some emotionally, some irresponsibly. The best of them assert, without exception that were it not for the urgent plight of Jews throughout the world today, they would have boycotted the deliberations and let the committee go its own way. But they also have a case that is urgent, as the committee is finding out the closer it gets to the Middle East.

The new-found sense of responsibility which the United States has brought to the inquiry is as temporized by the political background against which the Truman administration agreed to join Britain in the attempt to solve the Palestine problem, that it is almost a negative force in the hearings. There was considerable fun-poking by Foreign Office officials who met American correspondents in London at the time establishment of the committee was announced, because the announcement was held up for two weeks at the request of Washington, so it would coincide closer with the date of the New York City election.

Political considerations aside, the British inevitably raised the point when considering the role of the United States in Palestine, how far are you prepared to go in supporting us in solving this problem? Are you prepared to contribute troops to back up what your committee decide to be the right course of action? No matter what we decide, trouble inevitably looms ahead, and will you play your part? These are questions no American on the committee can answer, because the United States government has not made up its mind.

With very little that is new being developed by the committee, what then has been the caliber of its work and its membership? At best, it has offered a forum for all who have views to express them, forming a complete and open record of witnesses on both sides of the Palestine issue. It has brought together British and American members in the first joint study of the problem and offered hope of the first joint action toward a real and lasting solution.

At worst, it has, by the tactics of some of its members, aggravated a situation already delicate, considerably dampening hopes, inevitably pinned on the inquiry. It is not, in the words of one of its own members, "as distinguished as the Peel Commission," and after listening to the committee in action in London private estimation sinks considerably lower.

The aim of both the British and American governments appears to have been to produce a commission of men who primarily would bring legal experience to bear on the problem, who had no convictions one way or the other as to the future of Palestine and who, accordingly, almost without exception, are [illegible] there has been something of the stamp of a police line-up in the way the inquiry has been conducted by some of the members.

Arrogance, influence, superiority and downright impoliteness, unfortunately, have been the stamp of the hearings. Perhaps it is weariness from witnesses who have little new to add to the discussion, but certainly in this respect the committee has faced no more than many a legislative committee of the House of Representatives or the Senate which if at times are not intelligent, at least are polite. This is not the mark of all the members, but it has been the stamp of the committee leadership, and hence the committee itself.

The obvious deference of the British chairman to British titled witnesses as against the untitled was but one manifestation. The way in which one American member read a newspaper during testimony of a former British Cabinet Minister was another. The criminal-court fashion in which members have tried to pin witnesses to "yes or no" answers to questions that simply cannot be answered yes or no is still another.

Impatience with witnesses trying to explain their positions, questionable inferences concerning the motives of those appearing on the stand and piecemeal interrogation on points which impede and obscure testimony all mark the London hearings. Topping this, was an intent, defensive attitude on the part of British members against any implication that anything ever goes wrong in the British Empire or that British justice ever miscarries.

"Why do you not realize that if an official actually did what you describe he would be removed by the British government at once," one British member told a witness who in his testimony had questioned the action of the Palestine administration.

It is not too late for the Anglo-American Inquiry Committee to redeem itself, for it is upon its report and recommendations the committee will be judged. But it is unfortunate that in the first joint effort of the United States and Great Britain to reach a solution on Palestine better minds have not been brought to bear on the problem and more pliable, amiable and diplomatic men have not been named to the committee.

What is likely to be the result of the inquiry? As members left London, about the only thing certain was that they were still of open mind. They were generally of open mind, too, as to whether it will be possible to reach a middle-of-the-road solution which will show compromise on both the Jewish and Arab sides of the issue, or whether the answer lies solely in coming down hard either for opening Palestine to the Jews with the idea of making it a Jewish state or closing it to all but a small, carefully controlled immigration which will permanently preserve the supremacy of the Arabs.

The twelve men will try to write a unanimous report but at least two of them—one British and one American—are ready to file a minority report if they deem it necessary.

They have before them, as they move on to the Continent, the statement of one of their witnesses, a prominent British Jew, who summarized the dilemma and the aspiration of the inquiry at once when he told the committee: "Above all, reach a decision, for a decisive policy will cause far less trouble on either side than continued vacillation and indecision."

SAYS PRICE

business were not doing their part in "movements to strengthen and preserve democracy and to fight off corrosive and weakening influences." They should take an active part in the fight on intolerance he asserted, "if for no other reason than purely on the basis of enlightened self-interest."

Warning that industry "suffers along with others", in a Fascist order, Dr. Slawson urged business leaders to follow the example of Eric Johnston, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, "and take steps to eliminate group strife in any areas where they have influence."

Herman A. Gray, professor of law at New York University, who [illegible] Army officials, he said, showed a sympathetic attitude toward the camps and had done "an excellent job of rescue work," but pointed out that the camps were set up on a temporary basis and had no facilities which offered any sort of "normal life" for D.P.s.

Pointing out that there were only 80,000 Jews left in Germany and Austria, and another 60,000 in Poland "anxious to flee the insecurity and persecutions of that country," Mr. Gray said it was the duty of the United Nations Organization to open the doors of Palestine to them.

The problem of immediately resettling the thousands of displaced Jews of Europe on a permanent basis is much greater than that of improving the camps where they are now placed, said Dr. Herman Gray, professor of law at New York University, and one of a group of four representatives of the American Jewish Committee who made an inspection tour of displaced persons camps in Europe under the auspices of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration.

"The problem of the displaced Jews of Europe," Professor Gray said, "is a problem that must be solved on a permanent basis by the United Nations acting in concert. It is a problem far larger than that which is within the scope of the United States Army, a problem far more serious than that of the improvement of conditions of the camps.

Professor Gray said conditions at the camps where the displaced are located had improved and were constantly improving. He pointed out that these camps were established as temporary homes while the war was still in progress and in the initial stages of peace.

"Remember this," he continued, "the camps, with all their shortcomings, served the purpose for which they were intended, that is as places of rescue and physical restoration. It was not contemplated that they would be anything more than that".

He said the critical reports that came from Central Europe were caused by the fact that the camps were not intended for the use to which the displaced Jews of Europe were compelled to put them by force of circumstances.

He recommended that property of Jews who have died and of Jewish communal organizations in Germany and Austria where Jewish communities no longer exist should be put into a trust fund to be used in part to finance the rehabilitation and resettlement of the displaced Jews of Germany.

JEWS UNBEATEN

No special investigation of the latter point was made, however.

Estimates of the number of Jews left in Poland varied from 40,000 to 80,000. The number was said to have been kept almost constant by Jews leaving for the west and south in the hope of reaching Palestine and Jews en route west from Russia.

Mr. Crum said that the camps in the American zone must be cleaned out and the people permitted to "go where they want to." Asked if he meant Palestine, he said that was a matter for the whole committee to consider.

Other members of the committee also gave a picture of desperation coupled with extreme religious exaltation. Mr. Crum said that the Jews, despite their suffering, seemed to him to be the only people in Europe who were entirely unbeaten and that their courage was based on the conviction that they would be able to re-establish their lives and homes in Palestine.

He commended the work of American military authorities and the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration in caring for displaced Jews but said that he had found the camps shocking.

En route to Prague and Vienna, Mr. Crum, Sir Frederick Leggett, another member of the committee, and their escort were halted at the frontier for four hours by Czechoslovak guards on orders from Prague. No adequate explanation of the incident has been received to date, they said. Mr. Crum found the incident [illegible] Hungarian Government has [illegible] committee know it is not wanted there. Requests for visits to the two other countries and the Russian zone of occupation of Austria have not yet been answered.

Hearings will start in Vienna shortly. Delegations of Balkan Jews may be received if the committee is not permitted to visit their countries. It is estimated that there are 850,000 Jews in Rumania. This is the largest surviving group in the territory under investigation.
